

Rebuilding Together Communications Internship

This Intern will work directly with Rebuilding Together's Marketing and Communications team on campaigns as they relate to the organization's initiatives and events. The Marketing and Communications team plays a vital part in Rebuilding Together's programmatic work by raising visibility of the organizations' work and initiatives, leading safe and healthy housing educational campaigns and providing support to the development team.

The Communications Intern reports to the Associate Director of Marketing and Communications in Rebuilding Together's Washington, D.C. office.

Responsibilities:

Duties will include researching, writing and proofreading press releases, media advisories, blog posts, marketing decks and social media copy. This internship is an excellent opportunity for a candidate looking to gain first-hand experience of media relations and marketing campaigns and fundraising events.

Qualifications:

Public Relations, Mass Media, Marketing, Communication or Journalism majors a plus - any may apply. The ideal applicant is articulate, a motivated and independent thinker, good at taking direction and has strong problem-solving skills.

Applicants should also have:

Knowledge and understanding of media relations, social media, and marketing as they apply to the non-profit field.

Knowledge of and commitment to affordable housing and community revitalization issues.

Outstanding written and oral communication skills.

Computer proficiency in word processing, database work, email, and Internet research.

Strong organizational skills, ability to manage multiple tasks to meet deadlines, and desire to be a self-starter.

Ability to work well and creatively in a fast-paced, deadline-oriented environment.
